Chancellor Tells Germany It Must Stand Ready With Last Man.

CONDITIONS HAVE CHANGED

He Fears Power of Public Opinion Will Force Hostilities.

Berlin, April 7.—"If outside forces should threaten us, Germany must stand ready with her last man," declared the Chancellor, in Parliament to-day, when he said that Germany was not increasing the army and for providing new forms of taxation. His speech was a striking one, although he qualified his warning with the admission, in the form of French warlike all probability will not occur.

"The good intentions of the French and Russian governments are beyond question," declared the Chancellor, "but Germany must reckon with the great force of modern public opinion, patriotism and Russian Pan-Slavism, which threaten the world's peace, against the wishes of the great masses of both peoples."

It was noteworthy that in the Chancellor's speech Great Britain was referred to only as a pacific factor. Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, although indicating by his manner that he had little belief in the practicability of the suggestion made by the British Ambassador for a year's naval holiday, said Germany was willing to consider such a proposal. "But the British government," he said, "is not in a position to make such a proposal."

The Imperial Chancellor said the strength of the army had not kept pace with the growth of the German nation, and asked: "Can Germany allow itself the luxury of dispensing with tens of thousands of trained soldiers?" He continued:

"Conditions of Europe have been radically changed since the Balkan War, which has substituted for the passive European Turkey other states of feverish political activity. In all this there are factors of progress, indeed; but there is also a factor of danger. The danger is that the balance between Germany and Pan-Slavism, which has been in existence since the Balkan War, will be destroyed. This danger is the greatest of all."

The Chancellor declared he had made special efforts to cultivate good relations with Russia, and believed the Russian ruler and the Russian minister had been sincere in the events of the war. "But," he added, "the Russian government has not been sincere in the events of the war. It has not been sincere in the events of the war. It has not been sincere in the events of the war."

Germany, the Chancellor said, has been working to maintain the balance between Germany and Pan-Slavism, but should war break out the German empire would be unshakably left beside her ally.

The Chancellor then reiterated Prince Bismarck's saying:

"If the French want us to attack them, they will wait for us," adding that Bismarck foresaw a French attack on Germany whenever a warlike government, or one seeking relief from internal difficulties by indulging in foreign activity, came to the helm, and when the French had reason to believe themselves stronger than Germany.

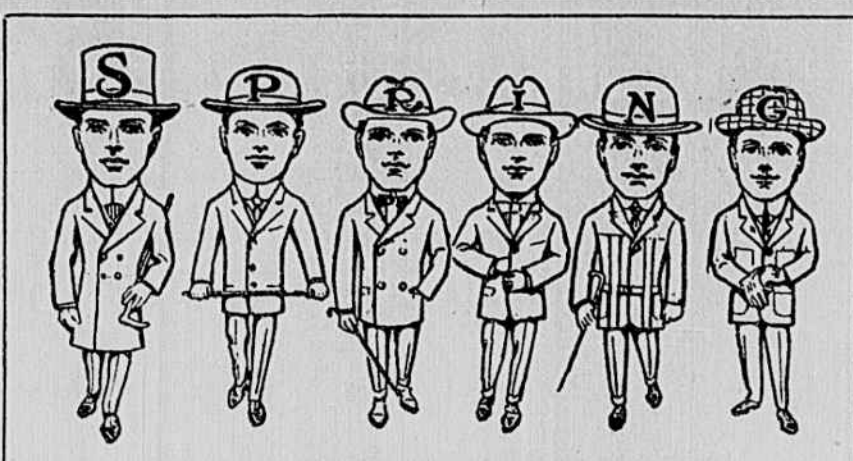

The French nation, he said, as a whole, was not striving for war, but Bismarck's contingency had been materialized regarding wide circles of the French people, not only among the fanatical patriots, but among the more peaceful and thoughtful elements of the nation. They believe themselves, if not superior, at least equal to Germany, declared the Chancellor.

Perhaps there was much illusion in the belief that had been awakened in France, but the war of 1870 was begun upon illusion. The present French Cabinet, he admitted, was peaceful, but the power of public opinion and the pressure of the loudest shouters must be reckoned with.

General von Heeringen, Minister for War, spoke briefly without giving details of the military measures which will be communicated in confidence to the committee of the Imperial Parliament.

Hugo Haas, a Socialist member, declared a lengthy attack on the military bill, declaring that it was necessary for additional militarism.

The French and German Socialist members of Parliament meet in Switzerland next week to consider means of preventing the proposed military increases.

SENATORS ARE NOT JUBILANT ABOUT COMING OF WILSON

The chamber expressed regret at the departure from the Jeffersonian custom of sending in written messages. Technical objection to its adoption at today's session except by unanimous consent was made by Senator Stone, supported by Senators Lodge and Snoot. Senator Williams made the speech upholding the value of the Jeffersonian precedent, and Senator Lodge was inclined to agree with him. Vice-President Marshall practically ended the debate by ruling that the resolution was of the highest privilege and therefore subject for action without unanimous consent at once. Although several Senators spoke against the Vice-President's ruling and for a few minutes an appeal was made, the resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Senator Bacon had asked that the resolution be adopted. Senator Lodge said he was not opposed to its passage, but reviewed the history of the procedure in the days when Washington and John Adams delivered their messages in person. He said that unless the Senate and House intended to conform with the custom of those days in making a return visit to the White House, and delivering a reply to the message, the custom would be only half observed. He cited authorities who agreed that the personal delivery of a message and the consequent return visit was a well-established custom, but only to delay of the public business.

Declines His Decision.

"For one, very much regret that the President has chosen to take this course," said Senator Williams. "The old Federalist custom of making speeches from the throne, when one departs, fell by unanimous agreement, and it did so because the common sense underlying the idea of a written communication to Congress, was obvious and plain and ever so much more in accord with American institutions. I hope, for one, that this will be the only instance of the breach of the perfectly simple and republican method which Thomas Jefferson introduced. I shall not oppose the resolution. I had hoped that some President at some time might have the courage to go away with the inaugural procession, that cheap and tinsel imitation of a coronation. About all that it does is to make a lot of people catch pneumonia, all the Washington boarding houses, and quicken trade, especially in the bedrooms."

Senator Shafroth closed the argument with the remark, "The President's coming here ought to produce harmony and not discord."

Opening proceedings in the Senate were perfunctory, but in the House the legislative leaders were hailed with wild applause as they appeared, and the galleries were crowded to overflowing, as the members, more than a third of them new ones, were sworn in. Majority Leader Underwood and Speaker Clark were given rousing ovations. In nominating Mr. Clark for Speaker, Representative Palmer, of Pennsylvania, was cheered when he said:

"I voice the common opinion of Democrats everywhere when I say that to his patriotic conduct of the Speaker's office was due, in no small part, the people's confidence in his party. Let us to our great victory, last November."

Thousands of bills were introduced in the House, and the Speaker's office was deluged with correspondence. The Panama Canal toll question reappeared within a few hours after the session convened, when Senator Root reintroduced his bill of last session for a repeal of that provision of the new Panama Canal act which would permit American coastwise ships to enter American ports free of duty.

CONFERENCE MAY ADJOURN AT NOON

Methodists Rapidly Completing Their Work at Lynchburg Meeting.

MANY REPORTS RECEIVED

Efforts of Maryland Anti-Saloon League Are Heartily Indorsed.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]—Lynchburg, Va., April 7.—Arrangements were made at the morning session of the Maryland annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church to adjourn not later than Tuesday noon, though it was not expected previously that adjournment would come before the third session to-morrow. At the two services to-day, the conference worked hard to dispose of routine work and reports from the conference and standing committees.

Rev. Mr. Andrews, agent of the Methodist Protestant Church children's home at Greensboro, N. C., explained the work of that institution, asking the conference to name committees to aid the home. He also invited the conference to hold its next meeting at the home.

The committee report on superannuated fund was adopted, by which the following names were added to the superannuated list: Rev. James Early Maloy, Rev. E. D. Anstey, Mrs. R. S. Rowe, Mrs. Herbert F. Wight, Mrs. W. S. Phillips and Mrs. S. J. Smith, the last four being widows of members.

A motion was adopted providing that Dr. F. T. Little fill the vacancy on the conference educational society, and the conference then voted to request the members of the board to investigate this action and make report at the next conference.

Rev. A. M. Ward explained the summary conference to be held at Westminster, N. Y., on August 10.

HEARD COAL CASE BEFORE AMERICAN SUPREME COURT

Four Contracts May Be Exempted From Recent Supreme Court Decision.

OTHER WORK OF TRIBUNAL

Rules That Leased Railroads Are Not Liable for Corporation Taxes.

Washington, April 7.—The Supreme Court to-day directed that its decision in the hard coal case be amended to give the Federal District Court in Eastern Pennsylvania power to decide whether certain leased railroad contracts should be exempted from the recent decision that such contracts were void.

The Supreme Court has held that the contracts whereby the railroad companies bought the output of "independent" operators at 65 per cent of the prices of coal at Tidewater, suppressed competition and violated the Sherman antitrust law.

The Lehigh, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, the New York, Susquehanna and Western Coal Company and the Pennsylvania Coal Company maintained that its contracts, or leases, did not suppress competition, and asked that the lower court, which was directed to enforce the decrees, be authorized to allow these leases to stand.

Justice Lurton explained that the court had been asked to exempt five contracts from the effect of the decision.

"We find there is adequate evidence before us to pass upon four of these contracts. Therefore, we modify the decree as to those four, and direct the court to take evidence and pass upon the fifth. The Attorney-General is willing to have the decree amended so as to exempt the contract between the Lehigh and Lackawanna Coal Company and the Elk Hill Coal and Iron Company, and amend the decree so as to exempt this contract."

The State railroad cases were not decided today by the Supreme Court. Among the decisions of the court to-day were the following:

Reversed the decision of the District Court of Alaska sustaining two counts in an indictment obtained by the government against the Alaska Transportation trust, which had been quashed by the lower court. The case was remanded for trial on the two counts.

Declared invalid the Wisconsin pure food law requiring labels on packages to indicate the nature of the contents, in so far as it applies to original packages imported into the State. It ruled that interstate commerce was not affected.

Denied application of Henry L. Bogert of New York, and others for an accounting of the transaction by which the Houston and Texas Central Railroad was sold to the Southern Railway, and the control of the Southern Railway.

Refused to sustain the decision of the Texas courts upholding the verdict of $15,000 awarded Marie J. McGuire of Bell County, Texas, as administratrix of the estate of her husband, an engineer killed on the road in 1909.

Approved the sentence of seventeen years of hard labor imposed on Juan Pico, manager of the Philippine Islands, for killing a Chinaman.

Reversed the judgment for $5,061 awarded Grant Brothers Construction Company of Los Angeles, against the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad for the loss by fire of grading equipment while in transit.

Titled leased railroads are not liable for Federal taxes in the case of William McCoach, collector of internal revenue of Pennsylvania, against the Minehill and Schuylkill Haven Railroad. In all, about 300 claims, involving $700,000, had been filed with the Treasury, hinged upon this case.

Upheld the authority of the United States courts to try a person for the murder of an Indian on an Indian reservation, in the case of James Donnelly, charged with the murder of an Indian.

Titled the negligence of a doctor must be proved before damages can be recovered by a patient, in the case of Annie Sweeney against Dr. W. C. Ervin, a physician of St. Louis, who was burned by an X-ray machine.

Held constitutional, the Nebraska law of 1906, regulating the shipment of stock by railroads, in the case of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad against W. I. Gramm and James M. Kyle.

Declared valid, the Chicago theatre ordinance imposing a license tax on amusement places, in the case of Metropolitan Theatre Company against the city.

Dismissed, suit of W. B. Plested and Charles Deane, of Las Animas, Col., to compel the register of the Public Land Office at Pueblo, Col., to receive their application of 240 acres of coal land in Colorado.

Upheld the right of the government to control property of Indians, purchased for them out of their own funds, in the case of the United States against O. T. Anderson, of Oregon.

THE ASSURANCE FOR FLOODED CITY

McAdoo Will Deposit $2,000,000 in National Banks of Dayton.

Washington, April 7.—Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department, will deposit $2,000,000 in the national banks of Dayton, O., to relieve the money shortage resulting from the flood, accepting government bonds or county bonds as security. This will be the first time since 1908 that the government has accepted as security for deposits bonds other than those of the United States.

This action was decided upon as a result of telegraphic advices to-day from National Bank Examiner Goodhart, who has been investigating conditions and requirements of the banks in the flood district. All of the seven national banks of Dayton will be designated as government depositories, and funds will be deposited with them as soon as they offer security satisfactory to the secretary. He expects the financial stringency in Dayton.

During the past few days the government has shipped to Dayton 200 tons of coal, a total of $2,000,000 to the Subtreasury at Cincinnati to meet pressing demands for money.
